Leong Wun Po was an admirable salesman. He was just the man the art dealers wanted, but it was hard for him to get accustomed to the ways of America. Then there was a wife and a young son back there in Canton, and Leong Wun Po was not happy away from them. Success as a salesman and success in business did not take the place of the wife and the son and he grew homesick.

Leong Wun Po was unhappy last night when he and Ho Yin, one of his business partners, went to their home on the top floor of the Eighth avenue Leong Wun Po slipped from the apartments about 3 o'lock this morning. He had arrayed himself in his costly sliks and allowed his queue to trail almost to his feet. yard is of earth, in the rear of No. 349, but next door, at No. 351, it is paved with asphalt. Leong Wun Po made a flying leap over into the asphalt paved yard and landed in a sitting position. He was still sitting when they found him later, and his heart had stopped beating.

The letter was signed Sadie Fisher, Lakewood, Ohio, and she said she is Lakewood, Ohio, and she said she is nine years old. She also gave a description of her father, who, she said, is forty years old.

Chief Clerk Bausch looked through the records and found that on Nov. 30 last year the body of Fred C. Fisher was picked up in the East River. He was identified as a man who had worked as a steam fitter, and the details of his death were lacking.

The description accords with that furnished by the little girl, who will be notified through the police.
